COURT INFLUENCED BY PIE?

MARY DONNELLY OF THE QUEENS SAYS IT WAS.

the's the Assistant Matron Who Just Won't Get Out, Though the Appellate Division Has Told Her To-Her Explanation Lacks Neither Amplitude Nor Limpidity

It looks as if things simply can't be made to stay put over at the Queen's county jail in Long Island City. When Sheriff Choe Meyerrose was in charge over there he tried to keep the prisoners inside the iail. but they would wander out, especially on bright Sundays; and now Choe's successor, sheriff Herbert S. Harvey, is trying to put Assistant Matron Mary A. Donnelly out, and she insists upon staying in. Justice Cavnor has just handed down a decision from the Appellate Division of the Supreme Court in which he allows that as Sheriff Harvey discharged Mary Donnelly a year ago she must pull the lace curtains off the windows of her quarters in the jail forthwith and go away from there.

"Are you going now?" Miss Donnelly was asked last evening.

"No, of course not," she said. "You know why Judge Gaynor decided against me, don't you? Well, it was apple pie. The whole borough is saying to-night that it was apple pie. When she catered here tefore I did-that other woman, I meanshe was famous for her apple pie. At least some folks said she could make good apple pie. And when he--"

"Judge Gaynor When he used to come up here to clean the calendar he had some of her apple pie, and that influenced him, I'll bet you anything."

It took hours of careful searching all over the jail to find Miss Donnelly before this important bit of court news was obtained One had to wander in and out of the jail all during the late afternoon and evening, and there wasn't anybody in sight to direct one to the particular room where the deesed matron was holding the fort.

If any of the prisoners were in the jail they were not to be seen, and Henny Sleth, the warden, had gone home. George Vedder, the night warden, hadn't reported for duty as yet so far as could be learned from just asually wandering in and out the jail and looking around. There was a man cleaning a dog in one corridor, but he said he didn't know anything about anything and went on cleaning the dog. Sitting around the front door to wait for some of the prisoners to come eturn to the jail for the night up to 7.0'clock. The only thing to do, then, was to look up good place in Long Island City to dine and take the ferry over to Manhattan for dinner and return later.

Miss Donnelly was found about 9 o'clock P. M. in this way having tea in the apartments she has retained for her very own on the second floor of the jail since she was theoretically discharged from them a year ago by Sheriff Hero Harvey, and which she was ordered out of by the Supreme Court last week. Miss Donnelly inished her to and talked a bit about geting new shades for the east windows and

"It should have been a mandamus instead of a writ of certiorari but let me egin from the beginning and if it's too long to run all at once THE SUN can run it in sections one section one day and another section another day and I'll finish it all up but I'm not going to get out of here until I see what can be done about an appeal," she said. "What did Sherif Harvey tell you over the phone on ne did did he? And so I took the civil service examination and stood very high and that's the way things went on and they brought the first woman in here tell you over the phone oh he did and then the other came and sometimes she would stay away for two weeks at a time the first one would and she'd stay away fourteen days and leave me to do the work and Sheriff Harvey will have to tell you himself that he personally com-plimented me on the way I did the catering not only for him but for the pris-oners. We'll start right from the beginning and get this all straight so that you can print it all at once or in sections and make it as strong as you want to and wind up with an appeal to Governor Hughes to make an investigation because things couldn't be any worse than they are as you can find out by asking any of the neighbors across the street in Jackson avenue or Mrs. Smith the matron down at the Fourth street police station who is a friend of mine and knows the story from beginning to end. They couldn't put Mrs. Homeyer out two years ago could they no you bet they years ago could they no you because couldn't and they can't put me out because I've stuck it out a year here since Sheriff l'arvey dischafted me but I come and go l'arvey dischafted me but I come and go was a successful a succ to begin at the beginning on the morning when the door was left open in February 1907 that they accuse me of when the Grand Jury was in session here I could not lock it that, morning and I had a sick woman that morning named Jane Lilly and had to go out to that door with a dose of castor oil and a glass of lemonade and if they do say that I left that jail door open I did try to lock it but I banged and banged and banged and banged and banged and banged to lock so I wasn't to blane. How refused to lock so I wasn't to blame. How could I know that Harry Pearsall wasn't employed at the jail that time I let him the other time I mean because I saw him so often in the jail because he always had access afternoon evening night to play cards with Mr. Wright. But Sheriff Harvey access afternoon evening night to play cards with Mr. Wright. But Sheriff Harvey discharged me in a letter dated April sthe 1997 and he served notice later on Secretary John C. Birdseye of the State Civil Service Commission some time later and I hear when I appealed that I was officially served with notice to leave still later in April and was onlying and put of the first of the firs that Sheriff Harvey has a right to discharge me last week. But of course I am not going until I find out whether I'm legally discharged. Now to begin this story at the beginning if you slam a door after you with a snap lock it must lock mustn't it of course it must and this door had a snap lock. She said to me in the presence of lazzie 'You had a long rope and hung your-self on the end of it' and clinched her fist at me as I swore in court but her talk didn't me. And prisoners never go out I was in charge and when escape they always go out the front "Then you haven't decided to leave, Miss the reporter asked, backing out the door.

"No." she answered gently, "and I'll tell you why, beginning from the very beginning."
Miss Donnelly here kindly related in detail the many difficulties that have beset her Miss Donnelly here kindly related in detail the many difficulties that have beset her path since she first began to be discharged from her present post last year. In conclusion she said that she would retain her spartments in the jail at least until she finds out whether she legally can be deposed and perhaps for some time later.

The mussel is not to be multiplied to produce an addition to the foed supply of the country, but it is to be cultivated for its shell. During the last year Commissioner of Fisheries Bowers says that $5,000,000 worth of fancy buttons have been made from mussel shells and the supply on account of this and on account of pearl hunters is getting scarce and propagation work is necessary.

Experiments by the Fish Commission have shown that mussels can be propagated rapidly and the necessary hatchery and ponds can be constructed without great expense. Congress appropriated $25,000 for the purpose of a hatchery and its erection will be begun soon after July 1, when the will be begun soon after July 1, when the money will be available.

It is Commissioner Bowers's intention to have a main hatchery and two branches, and the act requires them to be located somewhere in the Mississippi River Valley. It is the present intention to erect the main hatchery and ponds near Muscatine or Davenport, Ia., and a branch at La Crosse, Wis., and another at Winona, Minn. From these three places the Mississippi and other rivers will be supplied with young mussel to grow for manufacturing into "pearl" and other fancy buttons.

Restaurant to Be Open at Noon To-day at theCorner of Canal and ForsythStreets If Preparations Can Be Completed -Famine Conference This Afternoon.

There is to be food for the hungry school children of the East Side to-day unless the plans of the committee in charge of the relief work go awry. And just here let it be said that according to the people in charge of this work and in touch with school conditions the hungry children are not all in the two lower districts which have so far been brought most into public notice. Isidor Levy, president of the local board having to do with the educational work of the great East Side district and a member of the committee having direction of the relief work, said yesterday that it was a mistake to suppose that all the distress was in that part of town, or for that matter was a condition merely of the present moment. He said that there were hungry children in the schools more or less at all times and in various parts of the city. although their plight was not always brought to public notice. As a matter of course in these hard times the distress was greater, inasmuch as parents could not obtain employment, and was most noticeable in the congested districts. It is the intention of the relief committee, or at least it is the committee's hope, to make the work which this emergency has called forth something more permanent than a mere food kitchen or series of food kitchens designed to ameliorate present distress.

The committee met yesterday, after having worked on Sunday to the best of their ability, and talked over the best methods of carrying on their work. The landlord at 141 Division street, where the first dinner kitchen was to have been established, has changed his mind about the enterprise and the kitchen is not to be founded there. Instead the committee has taken control of the ground floor store at the southwest corner of Canal and Forsyth streets, and there the first kitchen, it is expected, will be opened to-day at 12 o'clock. Work was begun on the remodelling of the store on Sunday and continued with a rush yesterday. Sixteen tables and thirty-two benches are to be installed there, with a kitchen arrangement in the rear. Tickets to the restaurant, for such it will be in effect, are to be distributed by the princi-pals and teachers of the schools where improperly nourished children are most found. There will also be tickets for sale at a nominal sum at the kitchen only and to children only.

The reason for this decision of the committee regarding tickets to be sold is to be found in the committee's desire to have the work which is being established reach exactly those for whom it is designed and to do so without impairing their self-respect, to do so without impairing their self-respect, if possible. The committee believes that some of the children who are the most in need or aid will refuse to receive it, even though hungry, if they are made to feel that they are the objects of charity and may be pointed out as such. For this reason the committee has decided to have the tickets printed bearing the statement "Tickets 5 Cents." although none of those distributed by the teachers will be sold. They will, of course, be given away. And then to sell tickets for the neminal sum of five cents at the kitchen with the idea of enabling some who are too proud to take a free ticket to buy a ticket, although inside the children will be seated all together, so that there may be no distinction whatever, even among the children themselves, between those who paid for their tickets and those who received them free.

There is a wider aim then their in the coll

There is a wider aim than this in the selling of tickets and in marking them with a price. It is the hope of the committee or f some members of it to be enabled to establish a regular restaurant or several of them where school children may purchase nourishing luncheons at a nominal sum throughout the school year. To this the self-respect of the children presently to be benefited by the kitchen at Canal and Forsyth streets, it has been determined to call the place not a dinner kitchen but a children's lunchroom. If a kindly phi-lanthropist should come along and help to carry this work through his aid would be welcomed, but those behind the movement hope to be enabled to carry out the work in default of such assistance by the contributions of the public, who are now showing so much interest in the plans already under much interest in the plans already under way that their gifts are giving committee members larger views of human nature as it is found in New York.

The committee has received already more then $2,200, most of it in small gifts. Postcards asking for help are being received not dolly from the efficient districts but not only from the afflicted districts but from far up town as well. Some of these will be turned over to the Charity Organization Society and other bodies.

A conference arranged by the committee on physical welfare of school children is to be held at the Nurses' Settlement, 265 Henry street, this afternoon, to consider some of the questions raised by the revival of the plan to feed school children. Those who have been asked to attend are Presi-dent Winthrop of the Board of Education, President McGowan of the Board of Alder-President McGowan of the Board of Aldermen, Health Commissioner Darlington, Superintendent of Schools Maxwell, Br. Among the questions to be considered are the following:

If school children are to be fed should the work be confined to a few schools in one district or extended throughout all the boroughs wherever the need arises?

How much will it cost to treat all needy children equally?

Are children in school only to be considered, or is anything to be done for children under school age or the families to which

Is relief to be confined to children in the public schools or extended to those in parochial schools? As the schools are about to close, what is to be done for the children during the vacation?

Have existing agencies, public or private, falled to respond to appeals, or have principals and teachers failed to appeal to existing relief funds?

Edna/May Spooner came back to the Lincoln Square Theatre yesterday afterneon and produced a brand new play by J. Searle Dawley, called "A Daughter of the People," a drama of the empty dinner pail and the aching heart. The scene was laid in a cotton mill town in the south of Efigland, and in the first act everybody was starving because the cruel mill owner had shut down the works in order to get a corner in cotton. But hunger could not down the rhetorical propensities of the mill hands. Dell Hamilton, played by Miss Spooner, was the worst offender. She talked, in fact, like a John Stuart Mill hand.

As she wove her cotton at the loom she said she loved to wonder what its fate would be. "It may be a vestment for a king," she mused, "or a shroud for a philosopher." Ulria Slinger, a pragmatist, announced early in act 1 that she was going forth after lingerie and laughter, fleeing "this poverty that mocks and glares at you from high places."

And then Mr. Dawley had his inspiration.

"Oh, shut up!" she said. spiracy and said that he acted in the capacity of Hyde's attorney while here and that the work done by him was legitimate. John A. "Oh, shut up!" she said. She added that she was going to hell, and went into the wings. But she reappeared in the last act still virtuous—which was disappointing. She was the audience's

The wicked, cynical mill owner, who got a change of heart and Dell in the end, made a few epigrams. One was that the only women who are all angels are all angles. He thought too that women wear the white robe of purity only when it is open work in front. He was a very naughty cynic indeed. But Dell's rhetoric was too much for him. What cynic could resist Miss Spooner when she cried, "You think Protest of Manufacturers Against Prothat I am a cree-chewer like that?"

GREAT FLOOD IN THE MISSOURI. 1,375 SAIL ON KRONPRINZESSIN.

St. Louis, June 8.-Great freshets are flooding the Missouri Valley and the "Big Muddy" is bringing a large volume of water which will submerge East St. Louis To-night an order was issued for the removal of all live stock from the National Stock Yards in that town.

Old rivermen, who have all along contended that the rise here would be far above 30.2 feet, the stage reached to-night, which is the highest since 1903, when East St. Louis was submerged, fear it will go far above thirty-two feet and remain high some time because of continuous rains above. North Topeka, Kan., is submerged to a depth of from three to five feet. The flood there to-day drove 8,000 persons from their homes and washed out all railroad tracks.

The inhabitants of Armourdale and the lowlands of Kansas City are also abandon-ing their homes, the weather bureau having predicted a further rise there of eight feet. The Missouri River has passed the danger line at Kansas City and is rising rapidly, and the Kaw is twenty-one feet above low water, with a great volume on the way down from Topeka. All the tributaries of these rivers are overflowing.

The Missouri Valley is flooded from its headwaters in Montana almost to its mouth, with no relief in sight. The flood losses on the Hill railroads in Montana already total $1,000,000. Considerable damage has been done at St. Joseph, Mo., and vicinity. Points along the Mississippi above St. Louis report more rain to-night and levees threatened. Oklahoma trains remain waterbound and Oklahoma trains remain waterbound and business is tied up.

HELENA, Mon.. June 8.—The Great Northern brought in a train from Seattle by way of Fargo and two Northern Pacific passenger trains reached Helena to-day from the East. The East Helena smelters resumed operations and a few more wires were nut, into operation. The Northern were put into operation. The Northern Pacific officials say they have no idea when trains will run westward from Helena. The Great Northern does not expect to be running to Great Falls before ten days. The Oregon Short Line expects to resume service to-morrow, as does the St. Paul in eastern Montana.
